The IFF has specific regulations for Friendly Internationals.

Organising Committee

One of the most crucial single organs in the process of organising an event is the Organisation Committee which, in this document, is referred to as the Local Organisation Committee (LOC). The LOC is the window towards the teams and the IFF, therefore it is important to both select the persons carefully and start the planning in time.

The IFF Competition Regulations along with the IFF Organiser’s Regulations, which outline the minimum requirements that an organiser must fulfil, define the overall Event requirements that an Organising Committee must provide.

HOW TO GET STARTED

Each organiser, based upon their experience in organising events and the amount of resources they posses, must build an Organisation Committee that fits the needs of the Event.

• Firstly, you need to define the exact tasks of the LOC.
• Once you have a clear picture of the tasks then you can define what types of people and functions are required in the LOC. The IFF has defined what responsibilities the LOC has to cover, but how to divide the tasks is up to each organiser
• It is important to include persons with different skills and experience. If everyone has the same background it might negatively effect the operations of the LOC. For a more diverse approach to the organisation look for people also from outside of the Floorball world.
• The LOC should not be too big, since it then loses its ability to operate efficiently. A group of 5-7 core personnel is usually ideal, but you might need to have up to ten persons, depending how you organise it or how large your event is.
• Each LOC should try to have at least one employee who takes responsibility for arranging the practical details.
• The key knowledge that always has to be included in the LOC is the Competition, Logistics, Finance, Marketing, Media and VIP functions
• The financial planning and management is one of the LOC’s key tasks and dedicating a person for this task early in the process helps to monitor the financial side of the project. It is important not to over-emphasise the financial steering, but still to follow the financial plans.
• There are different ways to start the preparations, but building the LOC is one of the first things that needs to be done. You can have a smaller group making preparations early on, but the main LOC should be established at least 18-24 months prior to the major events and 8-12 months before smaller events.

Communications

Good communication, both before and during your Event, will be a key factor to its success. You need to make sure that everyone involved has access to information about what is happening and when. The communication between the LOC, IFF, volunteers, media, staff, suppliers and sponsors will be crucial.

How will the LOC communicate with each other? Who will communicate with the IFF? How will you communicate with your volunteers before and during the Event? It is not just the information that is important, but also how it will be communicated that needs to be clear.

TASKS AND DUTIES

Before the event

• Decide on how the LOC will communicate all the necessary information to everyone involved in the preparation of the Event
• Plan a system of communication with your volunteers so that you can tell them what is happening and when
• Provide some system for them to update their personal information and contact details (eg. Facebook, SMS, email, website)
• Plan how the LOC will communicate so that everybody has access to all of the information about the Event (eg. Dropbox files, email groups, Skype meetings, Intranet etc)
• Order and install mobile phone services. Check with different suppliers to get the best offer, or negotiate a barter agreement in return for sponsorship recognition.
• Decide on how staff and volunteers will communicate during the event. Remember that every person at a security check zone needs to have some way of contacting the Competition office or their supervisor if they need help.
• If you decide to use walkie talkies, order early enough and check their operation within the venue. Decide if you will use different channels for different groups.
• Plan an Information Centre within each venue (can be located in the Competition Office) that can be easily accessed by all volunteers and staff.
• Decide on what level of Internet services you will need at the venues for both the organiser and the media

During the event

• In the Information Centre have a noticeboard that has all the information that is needed - work rosters, catering times, transport schedules, match schedules, contact information for supervisors, LOC & IFF personnel
• Keep in constant contact with your volunteers - SMS, email, noticeboard

Things to note!

GENERAL

• There need to be clear communication channels that are used and promoted
• Make sure that everybody involved with the Event knows where they can find information or who they can contact to ask about something
• Communication should be a two-way process. Listening is one of the most important parts of good communication. Listen to the advice given by IFF Staff, listen to the comments and feedback from volunteers, media and teams.
• Use the information you receive from all channels to help make your Event better and to run more smoothly

CO-OPERATION WITH IFF OFFICE

• It is very important to maintain constant communication with the IFF office before the Event. Give regular reports of your preparation progress, ask for help if you need it
• During the Event, the IFF personnel are responsible for making sure that everything runs smoothly. Keep them updated with any problems and ask for help if you need it.
• Daily meetings between the LOC and IFF are very important to ensure that information about what is happening each day at the Event is communicated to everybody involved.

Information to Teams

The communication between teams and organiser is one of the elements for success from the organiser’s point of view. A lot of information is needed from the teams and, as we all know, it is sometimes not that easy to receive that information. Therefore it is important to make clear time-lines for teams and be prepared to send reminders.

TASKS AND DUTIES
BEFORE THE EVENT
IFF sends the team contact information to the organiser, based on the information received in registration

FIRST CONTACT: Organiser informs the teams about dates, arrival city, tournament city and venues. Organiser checks the validity of the contact information received by the IFF
Co-ordinate the organiser’s time-line with IFF’s time-line for official information asked from the teams (team lists, photos, team info etc)

INFO LETTER 1: Organiser’s first information letter to the teams should include basic information of accommodation options, organiser’s services to the participants, and ask the arrival and departure information of teams. In this info letter it is important to set the time-line for information needed from the teams.

OTHER INFO LETTERS: Based on the communication between the LOC and the teams, a detailed daily program can be built, including transportations, training sessions and other activities. Information about tickets shall be sent to teams

TEAM INFO PACKAGE: Sent by the IFF to the participating teams giving info about qualification of players, anti-doping, technical meetings, social media etc. IFF ask the teams to send team lists, information forms and photos to IFF, which the organiser can also use

TEAM MANUAL: Organiser should produce a team manual which includes all the event information. It should be distributed upon arrival to the teams, team guides, all IFF officials & staff

TEAM BOXES: Organisers should provide some system for daily distribution of information to the teams. These should be located in each venue and shall be checked regularly by the team guide/team leader during the event
